2. The chief emphasis of the briefing was on Mexico and Venezuela. The briefers covered the political situation in Mexico, its energy relationship with the US and the possibility that Mexican oil facilities could become targets for terrorists or disaffected Mexican workers. Also discussed were Mexican oil deposits and refining capabilities and the projected role Mexican petroleum will play in meeting long-term US needs. Cuba was viewed as a threat to US energy interests thorough its intervention in the Caribbean region. The final segment of the briefing focused on Venezuela with a political/military overview and disucssion of its relations with the US. [redacted]
